

A genealogical profile of William Holmes

Birth: William Holmes was born by 1610, based on his date of freemanship.

Death: He died between November 12 and 30, 1649.

Ship: Unknown, 1632

Life in England: William Holmes was a soldier. He returned to England in 1641 to serve in the Civil War, and returned to New England with the rank of Major. He also had property in Antigua.

Life in New England: As Lieutenant William Holmes, he escorted Massachusetts Bay Colony governor, John Winthrop, and his party on their return north from Plymouth. On March 2 1635/6, and again on March 1, 1636/7, he was employed by the colony to teach the use of arms. On June 7, 1637, he was elected as the leader of company of men sent to fight the Pequots. By 1639, he had removed to Duxbury and in 1641, had returned to England to fight in the Civil War. By 1645, he had returned to New England, by his own account very poor. Depositions concerning his estate indicate that he was living in a tavern in Boston, with financial support from his kinsman, Job Hawkins, by the time of his death.

Family: There is no evidence that William Holmes married or had children. His November 1649 will named only his sister-in-law, four nieces and his kinsman, Job Hawkins.

Where do I go from here?

Researching your family's history can be a fun, rewarding, and occasionally frustrating project. Start with what you know by collecting information on your immediate family. Then, trace back through parents, grandparents, and beyond. This is a great opportunity to speak to relatives, gather family stories, arrange and identify old family photographs, and document family possessions that have been passed down from earlier generations.

Once you have learned all you can from family members, you will begin to discover other sources. A wide variety of records can help you learn more about the lives of your ancestors. These include birth, marriage, and death records; immigration and naturalization records; land records; census records; probate records and wills; church and cemetery records; newspapers; passenger lists; military records; and much more.

When you use information from any source — an original record, a printed book, or a website — always be careful to document it. If you use a book, you should cite the author or compiler, the full title, publication information and pages used. Also be sure to record the author's sources for the information. If the author's sources aren't provided, you will have to try to find the original source. Many genealogical works contain faulty information, and the Internet also contains many inaccuracies. In order for your work to be accepted — by lineage societies and other genealogists — it must be properly documented.
