

A genealogical profile of William Mendlove

Birth: William Mendlove was born by 1612, if he was an adult in 1633.

Death: Nothing is known of his place or date of death.

Ship: Unknown

Life in England: Nothing is known of his life in England.

Life in New England: All Plymouth court records regarding William Mendlove are dated July 23, 1633. At that time, Mendlove, servant of William Palmer, was whipped for “attempting uncleanliness with the maid servant of the said Palmer, & for running away from his master, ...” William Palmer sold Mendlove’s service to carpenter Richard Church for seven years. During this period Mendlove was to learn the trade of carpentry and would receive two suits of apparel. There is no further record of this individual, but George Russell has argued that the Mark Manlove who appeared in Plymouth in 1637 is the same person, with his name either misrecorded or mistranscribed. This hypothesis remains unproven.

Family: There is no evidence that William Mendlove married or had children.

Where do I go from here?

Researching your family's history can be a fun, rewarding, and occasionally frustrating project. Start with what you know by collecting information on your immediate family. Then, trace back through parents, grandparents, and beyond. This is a great opportunity to speak to relatives, gather family stories, arrange and identify old family photographs, and document family possessions that have been passed down from earlier generations.

Once you have learned all you can from family members, you will begin to discover other sources. A wide variety of records can help you learn more about the lives of your ancestors. These include birth, marriage, and death records; immigration and naturalization records; land records; census records; probate records and wills; church and cemetery records; newspapers; passenger lists; military records; and much more.

When you use information from any source — an original record, a printed book, or a website — always be careful to document it. If you use a book, you should cite the author or compiler, the full title, publication information and pages used. Also be sure to record the author's sources for the information. If the author's sources aren't provided, you will have to try to find the original source. Many genealogical works contain faulty information, and the Internet also contains many inaccuracies. In order for your work to be accepted — by lineage societies and other genealogists — it must be properly documented.
