

A genealogical profile of William Trevor

Birth: William Trevor was most likely born in England.

Death: He died sometime after April 1650.

Ship: Mayflower, 1620

Life in England: There is nothing definitely known of his life in England, although he was a sailor by 1619.

Life in New England: According to a 1650 deposition, in the year 1619 William Trevor was in the "Company's service," probably the New England Company, a group which oversaw English colonizing ventures in New England, in the year 1619. He returned the next year, having been hired to come over with the Plymouth colonists and stay for the first year. He returned to England afterwards. He apparently was in Charlestown in 1650, when he made a deposition there.

Family: There is no information on any family members.

Where do I go from here?

Researching your family's history can be a fun, rewarding, and occasionally frustrating project. Start with what you know by collecting information on your immediate family. Then, trace back through parents, grandparents, and beyond. This is a great opportunity to speak to relatives, gather family stories, arrange and identify old family photographs, and document family possessions that have been passed down from earlier generations.

Once you have learned all you can from family members, you will begin to discover other sources. A wide variety of records can help you learn more about the lives of your ancestors. These include birth, marriage, and death records; immigration and naturalization records; land records; census records; probate records and wills; church and cemetery records; newspapers; passenger lists; military records; and much more.

When you use information from any source — an original record, a printed book, or a website — always be careful to document it. If you use a book, you should cite the author or compiler, the full title, publication information and pages used. Also be sure to record the author's sources for the information. If the author's sources aren't provided, you will have to try to find the original source. Many genealogical works contain faulty information, and the Internet also contains many inaccuracies. In order for your work to be accepted — by lineage societies and other genealogists — it must be properly documented.
