

A genealogical profile of John Thorpe

Birth: John Thorpe was born by about 1608, based on his estimated date of marriage.

Death: He died between April 1 and August 15, 1633.

Ship: Unknown, by 1632

Life in England: Nothing is known of his life in England. He presumably trained as a carpenter there.

Life in New England: John Thorpe was a carpenter. On January 20, 1632/3, his apprentice, Robert Barker, complained to the court about his lack of clothes, which he should have received from his master. Because Alice Thorpe had conceived a child before marriage, Thorpe and his wife were sentenced on April 1, 1633, to sit in the stocks and fined forty shillings. Because of their poverty, however, they were given twelve months to pay. John Thorpe died in the fever epidemic of 1633. Miles Standish and Stephen Hopkins, on behalf of the court, settled Thorpe's debts as far as his estate could make good, and Robert Barker's remaining time was turned given to William Palmer.

Family: John Thorpe married Alice _____ by April 1, 1633.

Children: A child was born in 1633. There is no further record.

Where do I go from here?

Researching your family's history can be a fun, rewarding, and occasionally frustrating project. Start with what you know by collecting information on your immediate family. Then, trace back through parents, grandparents, and beyond. This is a great opportunity to speak to relatives, gather family stories, arrange and identify old family photographs, and document family possessions that have been passed down from earlier generations.

Once you have learned all you can from family members, you will begin to discover other sources. A wide variety of records can help you learn more about the lives of your ancestors. These include birth, marriage, and death records; immigration and naturalization records; land records; census records; probate records and wills; church and cemetery records; newspapers; passenger lists; military records; and much more.

When you use information from any source — an original record, a printed book, or a website — always be careful to document it. If you use a book, you should cite the author or compiler, the full title, publication information and pages used. Also be sure to record the author's sources for the information. If the author's sources aren't provided, you will have to try to find the original source. Many genealogical works contain faulty information, and the Internet also contains many inaccuracies. In order for your work to be accepted — by lineage societies and other genealogists — it must be properly documented.
